

Individualized Daily Reading

Support for Parents

What is Individualized Daily Reading?

Individualized Daily Reading (IDR) is a classroom structure for independent reading in which students read “just-right” books at their appropriate reading level. The teacher plays an active role during IDR by meeting with students to monitor and support their reading comprehension. IDR is an important component in your child’s education as they need abundant practice reading independently if they are to become truly proficient readers.

Why we do use IDR?

Research shows that IDR is crucial to students’ development as readers.

What is a “just-right” book?

For IDR to succeed, the students must be reading books they can comprehend and read fluently with few errors.

Too Easy	Just Right	Too Hard
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Can read all the words• Can understand and retell the story• Reads with easy fluency	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Can read most of the words• Struggles with fewer than five words per page• Uses strategies to figure out tricky words• Can understand and retell the story• Reads fluently	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Cannot read many words• Does not have fluency• Cannot retell much of the story

What Does IDR Look Like in the Classroom

During IDR your child...

- Selects books
- Reads independently
- Applies skills and strategies
- Thinks about his or her reading

During IDR the teacher...

- Helps the students choose “just-right” books
- Models reading
- Provides one-on-one instruction and support

Students need...

- Time every day to read
- Choice of books
- Access to texts:
 - Matched to their level
 - From a wide range of genres and authors
 - That are interesting and engaging
- Opportunities to share and discuss reading with one another
- Instruction and support from teachers during one-on-one conferences

As we engage in IDR students...

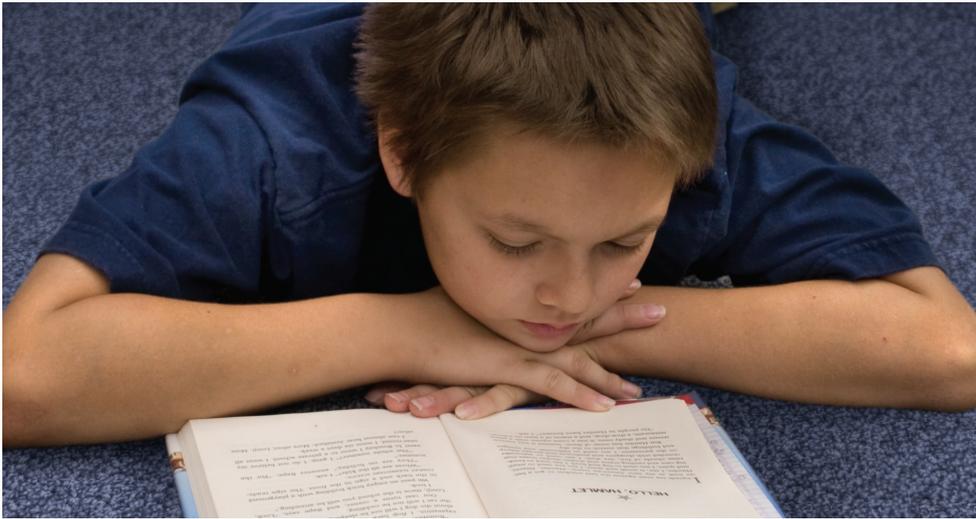

- Become competent and confident readers
- Learn how to choose appropriate books
- Develop reading stamina
- Use comprehension strategies to make sense of texts
- Share books with one another through conversations

How Can I Support IDR at Home?

Suggestions to build your child's reading life at home:

- Make weekly trips to the local library to borrow books.
- Set aside a time to read together every day.
- Stop every so often while reading aloud to talk with your child about what he or she is thinking about the story. (See conversation starters below.)
- Model good listening by paying attention to your child when the two of you discuss the story.
- In addition to the above suggestions, your child might be interested in keeping track of the books you read together. Your child might choose to record the title, author, and the date you read the book.

Conversation Starters

- Why did you choose this book?
- Why do you like/dislike this book?
- What kinds of books do you want to read?
- What is this story about?
- What has happened so far?
- What do you know about the character(s)?
- What are you wondering about?
- What do you think will happen next?
- What do you think you will find out about in this book?
- What have you learned from reading this article?
- What's something interesting you've read so far?